Realities of the here and now...

- Ongoing and rapid changes in protocols, directives, etc.
- Continuous news and social media reports
- Violence, brutality, racial injustice
- Extreme weather events
- Economic instability
- The future remains uncertain and unpredictable
- COVID-19’s continued impact is a health equity issue — particularly impacting marginalized communities
The Here and Now, Re-Traumatization, and Impact on the Workforce

All that is continuing to happen in the world is bringing to the forefront the number of health inequities that exist... not having the ability to work from home, not having access to healthcare, to food and water, to social support, to financial stability, to safe housing, etc.

...for those who belong to groups that have been made particularly vulnerable, experiencing these inequities directly can be re-traumatizing...

 being unseen/unheard, no choice/collaboration, being unsafe, disempowerment, mistrust

...for those striving toward health equity in their work, witnessing these inequities may cause a sense of sadness, anger, and/or helplessness...

 burnout, compassion fatigue, vicarious trauma, languishing, moral distress,

What is Health Equity?

All people having a fair and just opportunity to be as healthy as possible.

This requires removing economic and social obstacles to health to reduce and ultimately eliminate disparities in health and its determinants that adversely impact excluded or marginalized groups.
Trauma-Informed & Health Equity Perspective

We stop asking: “What is wrong?”

• Non-compliant
• Resistant
• Irresponsible
• Lack concern for others
• Poor life choices

We begin asking...

“What happened?”

• Lack of resources
• History of adversity & trauma
• Mistrust of systems
  • Systemic oppression & discrimination
  • Historical trauma & inequities
  • Lack opportunity to collaborate in solution-building

Informed Perspective
Individual Considerations and Strategies

- Work together with patients and their families to facilitate access to supports and services that address the social determinants of health
- Treat individuals as the experts of their own lives, and tailor service delivery to their context
- Seek out education and information to support you in recognizing the signs, symptoms, and culturally-specific expressions of trauma
- Take intentional notice of cultural strengths and resilience and collaborate with patients to create treatment plans that mobilize them to promote physical, mental, social, and spiritual health
- Prioritize rapport and relationship-building
- Strive to acknowledge the validity of and hold space for multiple truths and ways of doing things to support you in working with difference
- Use culturally-sensitive, person-first, and solution-focused language

Health Center/Leadership Considerations and Strategies

• Create intentional spaces for debriefing, sharing resources, celebrating individual and collective resilience, and providing support for one another (e.g., affinity groups)

• Establish and uplift equity as a priority in mission/vision/values statements

• Create formal structures to support the workforce to deliver equitable, culturally-responsive care (e.g., training, resource repositories, etc.)

• Review policies, procedures & protocols and revise as needed

• Make efforts to hire a workforce that reflects the diversity of the community

• Notice and seize opportunities for partnership and collaboration with other community members and organizations to bolster patient and workforce access to supports to address the social determinants of health

• Create physical space that is accepting and low-barrier

• Establish a process for accountability and repair when harm occurs

Reflection Point

What have you been doing that works to manage/cope with witnessing health inequity?

What is your health center/community already doing well to address health equity through a trauma-informed lens? What role have you played/could you play in advancing that action?
